Though the play 'Joy & Christmas' is about one woman's struggle to make peace with her family during this most family-oriented of holidays, the play's behind-the-scenes story is what it's really about.

City resident LaToya Perry, who has a degree in Film and is an award-winning writer and director, has written a play that creates an opportunity for young people to learn play production from beginning to end.

Ms. Perry has confirmed partnerships with Riviera Beach's Youth Empowerment Program, several programs at Inlet Grove High School, G-Star Performing Arts School and the theatre program at Palm Beach State College—all of which are allowing students to participate (in exchange for community service hours) and learn skills they can use to build their resumes and, by extension, sell in the marketplace. In other words: on-the-job training.

Ms. Perry, who has more than 15 productions to her credit since graduating in 2009, believes the play should not be just about entertainment, but also about education, believing and having hope. All kids do not play football, Ms. Perry loves to say. Ms. Perry is program coordinator of the nonprofit Bridging The Gap, which is a unit of Thrive For A Change, Inc., that works with young people on skills building. Most of the cast, like Ms. Perry, live in Riviera Beach.

This donation will be used to buy materials, pay for advertising and for professionals who will work with the students. The play will be performed on December 18 at Inlet Grove High School.
